St. Paul's Cathedral—South View. St. Paul's, as we know it, rose Phoenix-like from the ashes of the glorious Gothic church which preceded it, and was designed by Sir Christopher Wren. Begun in 1645, it was completed in 1710, a great triumph; under one architect, one master mason, and during the rule of one bishop. Portland stone was used and the ironwork was from the now extinct furnaces of the Sussex Weald.
